

Committee on Relations with Information Vendors (CRIV)

Annual Report, 2021-2022

Through our programming, publications, and During the heart of the pandemic last year, our requests for assistance were higher than normal. As the pandemic fades and we begin returning to a new normal, requests this year were down significantly, but that does not mean the committee was without work. Instead, we were able to focus our efforts on generating content for The CRIV Sheet and the CRIV Blog, continue our semi-annual vendor calls with LexisNexis, Westlaw, Law, Thomson Reuters, and Wolters Kluwer, and prepare for the annual CRIV Roundtable, held in June. We took on one additional project this year, a survey of AALL membership about awareness and use of CRIV services. Highlights of these initiatives follow.

The CRIV Sheet had a new editor this year, Andrew Christensen, who tirelessly throughout the year, writing, soliciting, and editing content for all three issues of volume 44. Traditional fare, such as the inclusion of the minutes from our vendor liaison semi-annual calls, summaries of CRIV-related AALL Annual Meeting program sessions, and previews of CRIV-related programming coming up at the 2022 Annual Meeting, continued to fill our pages. But we also brought in original content, from profiles of newer legal information platforms to recommendations for beta testing to working with the Uniform Electronic Legal Materials Act. I'd like to extend thanks both to
